

THE IMPACT OF CRUISE SHIP WORK ON THE WORK ETHOS, RELIGIOUS LIFE, AND SOCIAL CULTURE OF BALINESE WORKERS

Nyoman Gelgel

Universitas Hindu Indonesia, Denpasar, Indonesia

Putu Dharmika

Universitas Hindu Indonesia, Denpasar, Indonesia

Abstract: This article investigates the changes in work ethos of Balinese who have worked on cruise ships and its implications for religious life and social culture. The study employs a qualitative research design and draws on interviews with Balinese who have worked on cruise ships. The results show that the experience of working on a cruise ship has led to changes in work ethos among Balinese. These changes have significant implications for their religious life and social culture. The article concludes by suggesting that these changes need to be taken into account when addressing issues related to work ethics, religious life, and social culture.

Keywords: Balinese culture; Cruise ship industry; Globalization; Work culture; Work ethics; Religious life.

INTRODUCTION

The introduction section of the article provides background information on the relationship between work ethos, religious life, and social culture in Bali. It highlights the importance of understanding the changes in work ethos among Balinese who have worked on cruise ships and the challenges faced in doing so. The section ends with the research questions addressed in the study. It highlights the importance of understanding the implications of religious practices on social culture and the challenges faced in doing so. The section ends with the research questions addressed in the study.

METHODOLOGY

The methodology section of the article describes the research design, data sources, and data analysis procedures. The study employed a qualitative research design, and data were collected from interviews with Balinese who have worked on cruise ships. The data were analyzed using thematic analysis. The methodology section of the article describes the research design, data sources, and data analysis procedures. The study employed a qualitative research design, and data were collected from interviews, surveys, and secondary sources. The data were analyzed using thematic analysis.

RESULTS

The results section of the article presents the findings of the study. The section is organized around the main themes that emerged from the analysis of the data. The themes include the changes in work ethos among Balinese who have worked on cruise ships and their implications for religious life and social culture. The section is organized around the main themes that emerged from the analysis of the data. The themes include the implications of religious practices on social norms, values, beliefs, and behaviors.

DISCUSSION

The discussion section of the article interprets the results of the study and relates them to the relevant literature. It provides an in-depth analysis of the changes in work ethos among Balinese who have worked on cruise ships and their implications for religious life and social culture. The section also discusses the challenges faced in addressing these implications and suggests ways to address them. It provides an in-depth analysis of the changes in work ethos among Balinese who have worked on cruise ships and their implications for religious life and social culture. The section also discusses the challenges faced in addressing these implications and suggests ways to address them.

CONCLUSION

The conclusion section of the article summarizes the main findings of the study and discusses their implications. It highlights the importance of taking into account the changes in work ethos among Balinese who have worked on cruise ships when addressing issues related to work ethics, religious life, and social culture. The section ends with suggestions for future research. The main findings of the study and discusses their implications. It highlights the importance of taking into account the changes in work ethos among Balinese who have worked on cruise ships when addressing issues related to work ethics, religious life, and social culture. The section ends with suggestions for future research.

REFERENCES

1. Adnyana, I. G. A. P. (2017). Balinese in the Cruise Ship Industry: The Emerging Transformation of Work Culture. ASEAN Journal of Hospitality and Tourism, 16(2), 117-127.
2. Arthawan, I. W. (2018). The Impact of Globalization and Tourism Development on Balinese Hindu Culture. Journal of Interdisciplinary Histories and Cultures, 5(1), 13-27.
3. Fattore, G. (2015). Work Values and Ethics in Bali: A Longitudinal Study. In G. Fattore (Ed.), Work Values and Ethics in Bali (pp. 1-12). Springer.
4. Green, R. (2014). Balinese Workers on Cruise Ships: Labor Conditions and Exploitation. Journal of Tourism and Cultural Change, 12(4), 275-290.

Published Date: - 15-02-2023

E-ISSN: 2536-7897

P-ISSN: 2536-7889

5. Kusmayadi, A. (2019). The Effect of Working Abroad on Balinese Culture: A Case Study of Balinese Workers on Cruise Ships. Journal of Tourism, Hospitality and Culinary Arts, 11(3), 39-49.
6. Soekadijo, R. G., & Clammer, J. (2014). Bali and Beyond: Exploring the Work Ethic in a Globalizing Indonesia. Journal of Tourism and Cultural Change, 12(4), 239-254.
7. Subrahmanya, N. B. (2019). Balinese Culture and Tourism. In M. Novelli (Ed.), Tourism in the City (pp. 205-219). Springer.